SALSA Geophysics/SALSA EM, Location: Camp 20

- After the SALSA Traverse left yesterday morning (now 18 miles from SLM!), SALSA Geophysics camp was greeted by a new visitor just before breakfast: a flock of four skua pecking around the area SALSA traverse had vacated. A fun way to start the day.
- We spent the beautiful day buttoning up sleds for our move tomorrow. Eight sleds will fit our science equipment, all our camping gear (tents, food, kitchen, propane, bathroom, supplies, sleep kits), four drums of snow machine fuel, and our personal bags. In the morning (if weather stays nice), we eat a quick breakfast break down our tents, and head out on our 75 mile drive to establish our next camp.
